A: You can use \isblank to know if what is currently under the cursor is a space: \documentclass{article} \usepackage{filecontents} \begin{filecontents*}{\jobname.tex} \usepackage{ifluatex} \ifluatex\documentclass{book}\else\ifluatex\documentclass[a4paper]{book}\fi\fi\fi \begin{document} \section*{Final Exam} I hate to make this boring for everybody, but the final exam is NOT LESS important than the rest of the exam! If you didn't understand the previous exam, you can do it over again, but only if you do it really well this time. For that reason, there is nothing wrong with taking the final exam over the course of more than one day. In fact, I believe it to be beneficial, as you can be more certain that your study time was worth it. \chapter*{Supplementary Material} Properly formatted PDF, and other material that you will need to study for the final exam is at the following address. \chapter*{Practices} Studying for the final exam is not just about reviewing the stuff you learned over the course of the course. I also recommend you study your lectures and work more on your own, trying to recall what you learned. If you try to review everything at once, you won't have a chance to study the material correctly and it will show up in your exam. This is a very hard concept to get into, but hopefully this is clear. \section*{Midterm} The midterm was a little tougher than the rest of the material, but I guess that's to be expected. Now to the really fun part of your final exam: In fact, the midterm was pretty hard for most of you, which shows that you have started taking the study process seriously. You guys really showed up to be able to get this far! So, for those of you who actually managed to do well on the midterm, I think it would be prudent to retake the midterm to make sure you don't waste any of
